Purpose of processing the data

It is necessary for us to process personal data of contractors for the following reasons:

1. We will need the information for the purposes of the tendering process;
2. We will need to maintain that information for the general purposes of the ongoing contractual relationship including;

performing the contractor agreement and maintaining the health and safety of individuals on our premises.

Some examples of the specific situations in which we will use your personal data are making decisions about the terms on which you work for us; checking you are legally entitled to work in the UK; paying you; taxation; business management and planning, including accounting and auditing; conduct requirements; making decisions about pay; assessing qualifications for a particular job or task; making decisions about your continued engagement; making arrangements for the termination of our working relationship; dealing with legal disputes involving you, including accidents at work; ascertaining your fitness to work; complying with health and safety obligations; to prevent fraud; to ensure compliance with our IT policies; to ensure network and information security, including preventing unauthorised access to our computer and electronic communications systems and preventing malicious software distribution; and equal opportunities monitoring.

Our legal basis for processing personal data of contractors is that:

1. Processing the personal data is necessary for the purpose of carrying out the contract with you or to take steps to enter into a contract; 2. Processing is necessary to comply with a legal obligation (for example we are obliged to ensure your health and safety); and/or 3. Processing the data is necessary for the purposes of our “legitimate interests” as the data controller (except where such interests are overridden by the interests, rights or freedoms of the individual).

Our “legitimate interests” for these purposes are:

1. The need to process data on contractors for the purposes of assessing suitability for work and then carrying out the contract;
2. The need to gather data for the purposes safeguarding your health and safety;
3. The need to transfer contractor data intra-group for administrative purposes; and
4. The need to process contractor data for the purposes of ensuring network and information security.

We may from time to time need to process sensitive personal data of the kind described above.

In that case we will either obtain the explicit consent of the individual to the processing of such data or we may consider the processing of that data as being necessary for carrying out our legal obligations. That will be assessed on a case by case basis.

There is no strict statutory or contractual requirement for you to provide data to us but if you do not provide at least that data that is necessary for us to assess suitability for employment work and then to conduct the working relationship then it will not practically be possible for us to engage you.

Recipients of personal data

Your personal data may be received by the following categories of people:

1. Our HR department;
2. Our clients;
3. Any individual authorised by us to maintain personnel files;
4. Our professional advisers; and
5. Appropriate external regulators and authorities (such as HMRC and HSE)

We do not envisage that your data would be transferred to a country outside the EEA. If we perceive the need to do that we would discuss that with you and explain the legal basis for the transfer of the data at that stage.

Duration of storage of personal data

We will keep personal data for no longer than is strictly necessary, having regard to the original purpose for which the data was processed. In some cases we will be legally obliged to keep your data for a set period.

Your rights in relation to your personal data

1. The right to be forgotten

You have the right to request that your personal data is deleted if:

a) it is no longer necessary for us to store that data having regard to the purposes for which it was originally collected; or b) in circumstances where we rely solely on your consent to process the data (and have no other legal basis for processing the data), you withdraw your consent to the data being processed; or c) you object to the processing of the data for good reasons which are not overridden by another compelling reason for us to retain the data; or d) the data was unlawfully processed; or e) the data needs to be deleted to comply with a legal obligation.

However, we can refuse to comply with a request to delete your personal data where we process that data:

a) to exercise the right of freedom of expression and information; b) to comply with a legal obligation or the performance of a public interest task or exercise of official authority; c) for public health purposes in the public interest; d) for archiving purposes in the public interest, scientific research, historical research or statistical purposes; or e) the exercise or defence of legal claims.

2. The right to data portability

You have the right to receive the personal data which you have provided to us, in a structured, commonly used and machine-readable format and have the right to transmit those data to another controller without hindrance from the controller to which the personal data have been provided (us) where:

a) The processing is based on consent or on a contract; and b) the processing is carried out by automated means.

Note that this right only applies if the processing is carried out by “automated means” which means it will not apply to most paper-based data.

3. The right to withdraw consent

Where we process your personal data in reliance on your consent to that processing, you have the right to withdraw that consent at any time. You may do this in writing to the HR team or to your line manager.

4. The right to object to processing

Where we process your personal data for the performance of a legal task or in view of our legitimate interests you have the right to object on “grounds relating to your particular situation”. If you wish to object to the processing of your personal data you should do so in writing to HR or to your line manager stating the reasons for your objection.

Where you exercise your right to object we must stop processing the personal data unless:

We can demonstrate compelling legitimate grounds for the processing, which override your interests, rights and freedoms; or the processing is for the establishment, exercise or defence of legal claims.

5. The right of subject access

So that you are aware of the personal data we hold on you, you have the right to request access to that data. This is sometimes referred to as making a “subject access request”.

6. The right to rectification

If any of the personal data we hold on you is inaccurate or incomplete, you have the right to have any errors rectified.

Where we do not take action in response to a request for rectification you have the right to complain about that to the Information Commissioner’s Office.

7. The right to restrict processing

In certain prescribed circumstances, such as where you have contested the accuracy of the personal data we hold on you, you have the right to block or suppress the further processing of your personal data.

8. Rights related to automated decision making and profiling

The GDPR defines “profiling” as any form of automated processing intended to evaluate certain personal aspects of an individual, in particular to analyse or predict: performance at work; economic situation; health; personal preferences; reliability; behaviour; location or movement

You have the right not to be subject to a decision when it is based on automated processing; and it produces a legal effect or a similarly significant effect on you.

However, that right does not apply where the decision is necessary for purposes of the performance of a contract between you and us. We may use data related to your performance or attendance record to make a decision as to whether to take action to end the contract with you. We consider that to be necessary for the purposes of conducting the contract. In any event that is unlikely to be an automated decision in that action will not normally be taken without an appropriate manager discussing the matter with you first and then deciding whether the data reveals information such that formal action needs to be taken. In other words there will be "human intervention" for the purposes of the GDPR and you will have the chance to express your point of view, have the decision explained to you and an opportunity to challenge it.

Complaints

Where you take the view that you're personal data are processed in a way that does not comply with the GDPR, you have a specific right to lodge a complaint with the relevant supervisory authority. The supervisory authority will then inform you of the progress and outcome of your complaint. The supervisory authority in the UK is the ICO.
